

Gail Jackson

San Antonio, Texas, 210-653-2025

A native Texan, Gail Jackson spent more than three decades teaching in Texas public schools, first as an elementary classroom teacher and later as a specialist with gifted children. After retiring, she began painting, learning from several of San Antonio's finest painters. She has participated in shows of the Starving Artists Gallery as well as with the River Art Gallery. A member of the River Art Group and the Coppini Academy of Fine Arts, she has produced paintings that have made their way to many states and foreign countries, her first sale going to Moscow, Russia. Most of her oils and watercolors feature landscapes, flowers and famous landmarks. Having traveled widely, some subject matter reflects scenes from Europe, Asia and Africa, although much depicts scenes from Texas and San Antonio in particular.
